U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Reviews Cleanup at the Endicott Village Well Field Superfund Site

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is conducting its fifth five-year review of the Endicott Village Well Field Superfund site located in the village of Endicott, Broome County, New York. This review seeks to confirm that the cleanup conducted at the site continues to protect human health and the environment. The cleanup conducted at the site included installing an air stripper at the Ranney Well, a municipal drinking water supply well, to remove volatile organic compounds; extracting and treating contaminated groundwater through a supplemental purge well; periodic groundwater monitoring; and placing a cap on the Endicott Landfill to address the source of the contaminated groundwater. A summary of cleanup activities and an evaluation of the protectiveness of the implemented cleanup remedies will be included in the five-year review report.

What is an EPA Five-Year Review?

The purpose of five-year review is to ensure that implemented remedies at Superfund sites function as intended and continue to be protective of human health and the environment. These regular reviews, which are required by federal law when contaminants remain at a site, include:

- Inspecting the site and cleanup technologies;
- Reviewing monitoring data, operating data, and maintenance records; and,
- Determining if any new regulatory requirements have been established since EPA's original cleanup decision was finalized.

When will EPA's Five-Year Review Report be available?

It is anticipated that the five-year review report for the Endicott Village Well Field Superfund site will be available at the website noted below in January 2021.
